

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW AND GOVERNMENT PROJECTS

A benchmark in public projects: bidding, contracts, and tax regulation

Since the 1990s, when the private sector began to increasingly participate in areas previously restricted to the public sector, our Administrative Law and Government Projects practice has been meeting the demand created by the privatization of state-owned companies and infrastructure services, including ports, highways, railways, and, more recently, airports.

We also have significant experience in handling matters before regulatory agencies and other oversight and control bodies, in addition to acting as defense attorneys in sanctioning proceedings and in judicial and administrative proceedings, such as before audit courts.

Our professionals work with public administration entities to structure bidding processes, privatization processes, and prepare and draft agreements and agreements between the government and the private sector.

The team also stands out for its work in matters involving allegations of administrative misconduct and anti-corruption legislation, including participation in complex negotiations with the public administration to conclude agreements (such as leniency agreements and conduct adjustment agreements). We also assist our clients in internal investigations related to Administrative Law matters, working with our Compliance and Investigations department.
