With the growing awareness of oil's environmental impact and the increasing global importance of reducing carbon emissions, local and foreign investors have turned their attention toward Brazil's renewable fuels industry. Against this backdrop, we have participated in some of the industry's most prominent transactions, advised on numerous industry-related M&A transactions, and led the development of innovative projects that produce energy through the use of sugar cane, ethanol, biomass, and other alternative fuels.

The energy market presents challenges to new players on many levels, including tax, labor law, environmental legislation, and contract disputes over landownership. Our deep experience in M&A, agribusiness, and energy has proven to be essential to clients in this sector. Our multidisciplinary approach gives our professionals a comprehensive understanding of each transaction and the needs of the companies involved.
